What Can Government Do For Us?

It is proper and reasonable that government also should wonder what it can do for us at a time when its chief executive spokesman is naming the things we can do for it. But before either President Kennedy or the rest of us can get down to cases, we must define what we mean.

When we talk about what we can do, we especially have in mind sacrifices that will be made by those whose personal services will be required-citizens who will be asked to give their time, their security, their peace of mind and, perhaps, their lives.

We think of those citizens who by nature are self-sacrificing-the ones who respond to every call of duty by going the second mile. Some of them have volunteered for service in the Peace Corps, because they are driven by this desire to serve their fellowmen in unusual ways.

We think of all those on whom every burden, however small, rests heavily because they have meager resources. They are frequently among the least complaining of all of us. It is though their lack of resources had been balanced by fortitude

We do not think of taxation as a sacrifice, or even as an act of special devotion, because it is a common duty. But we fear extraordinary burdens of taxation, because they wipe out the margin of security that makes the American people able and willing to accept responsibility for their less fortunate neighbors-the only people on earth who accept such an obligation to their fellowmen.

We have this in mind when we think of what the government can do for us at a time when it is talking about what we can do for it. We need to be assured that the government will be prudent in its handling of the nation's resources, that it will not be frivolous or indifferent in its expenditures, even when they are sanctified by the label of

We need to know it will observe a priority in its spending decisions, putting first things first and abandoning or postponing optional

We need to be told that government will draw a line separating those things that are merely desirable from things that are absolutely essential and will observe the dis-

If this were to be done promptly, we could think more straightforwardly about the things we can do for Washington.

Another youngster was hurt Wednesday afternoon when - according to reports - he ran into the path of a car.

The simple solution to the problem would be for the kids to quit playing in the street. That's too much to expect, however. Younsters always have found the thoroughfares inviting, and probably always will.

So, with the feeling that the kids are there to stay, now would be a good time for parents to sit down once more with their children and remind them of the dangers of traffic. It also would be a good time for motorists to become more alert and drive more carefully.

Who knows when a youngster may dart into the path of your car?

Castro Lays Down The Line

Fidel Castro laid down the party line for his Cuban followers on the eighth anniversary of his July 26 revolution:

"The revolution will have only one organization. This is the meaning of the integration of revolutionary organizations."

Americans struggling to understand how the minds of this world's Castros work can see the working clearly in this offshore miniature of a totalitarian state. It is a totalitarian state, not a socialist state, that is being organized in Cuba. Socialism is incidental there, as it is in Russia. Russian Communists give only lip service to socialism. The word and the idea it conveys are political bait to trap the unwary. Once they take the bait, they lose the privilege of revolt. They forego the possibility of disagreement that made revolution at-

There never will be another revolution in Cuba, if Castro has his way. His regime is as absolute as the Batista regime he overthrew - more so, because Batista never closed the door on the possibility of elections. Castro must keep the door closed by terror. He must maintain a police state to cut down his opposition whenever it appears. The one-party system forbids legal dissent to a government, it cannot change the nature of running through the minds of men. In free countries, the "other side" has the right to be heard. It has the right to ask for popular support, and if it can rally enough support in a free election it has the right to supplant the losing side.

There will continue to be Cubans who will remember the right to dissent. They never will give their support voluntarily to Castro's totalitarian government. They will fight it when they can. They will flee from it when they can. They will dissent from its decrees and argue for its overthrow when

But they will be outlaws for doing this. If Castro is strong, they will be futile. He will continue to do what he has been doing for several years - kill his dangerous op-

The prospect for Cuban dissenters is bleak. Totalitarian police states are not toppled easily. Italy collapsed because of the war. Germany was defeated on the battlefield. But the Soviet Union has survived all blows. Red China has survived. Russia's satellites have survived.

Big And Little

Every time we read of what might be termed a "small - time" violator being knocked off in Hancock County, we wonder why some of the "big boys" still are escaping the long arm of the law.

If the "small-timers" violate a law, naturally they should pay the penalty. But so should the "big boys" when they do the same thing, but on a much more extensive

-But Not The Government

A White House statement that any communication satellite system developed in the United States must be in private hands blocks government out of the picture.

But the presidential policy on private ownership is not a surprise. People who are well-informed about development of communication satellite systems had foreseen that it couldn't be carried on in any other way. The prospects are so wide-ranging and the cost of development so huge the government couldn't assume such a heavy responsibility. It has its missile program to worry about-and that alone is a big enough tail to wag a government dog.

The surprise in the White House policy is omission of steering action for regulating competition among private hands reaching for a chance to move into this exciting new field of communication. The Federal Com-

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., already established in the field of international communications, has been contending it should bear primary responsibility. No other enterprise, it points out, has the facilities to make immediate use of satellite communications. Moreover, it points out, it has a working model of the satellite to be used and needs only government cooperation to go forward quickly. It is offering tired, lonely, frightened. They to pay the cost of shooting the satellites

This would not bar other private enterprise, which would be free to use all AT&T facilities, just as they are used now for television broadcasting. But it would bar a kind of competition that would benefit no one and avert a kind of chaos that might force government into a field that President Kennedy says government should avoid.

Kennedy's Problems

Presidential problems ride John F. Kennedy's back like a monkey gorging itself on a fresh supply of calories every day.

Kennedy knew he would have problems, but didn't realize how quickly they would build up.

While he was still a candidate. asking for the problems, he told the National Press Club Jan. 14,

"We will need in the 60s a president. . . willing and able to summon his constituency to its finest hours, to alert the people to our dangers and opportunities. to demand of them the sacrifices that will be necessary.

The word "sacrifices" is a permanent part of his vocabulary. He used it later in his inaugural address and again in his TV talk last Tuesday night.

On that day in 1960 he also

"The time has come. . . again" for the "moral" leadership of a Wilson, Lincoln, Truman, Franklin D. Roosevelt who "led the people as well as the government (and) fought for great ideals as well as bills."

WASHINGTON Tocqueville could see when that would change "It is chiefly in its foreign relations that the executive power of a nation finds occasion to exert its skill and its strength. If the existence of the union were perpetually threatened . . . the exective government would assume an increased importance in proportion to the measures expected of it and to those which it could execute.

Those days came when America was no longer isolated and the presidency, under Wilson and Roosevelt, assumed increasing importance as the existence of the Union was threatened in two world wars.

But while Kennedy's problems are similar to theirs in a very real sense they are extremely different. Now the existence of the Union, as De Tocqueville anticipated, is "perpetually threatened" by Communism. Where Wilson and Roosevelt had the burden of fighting a war, Kennedy must not only be ready for it but, through whatever skill he has, try to prevent it without losing in troubled peace either suddenly or bit by bit by attrition. It was put another way by James MacGregor Burns, biographer of both Roosevelt and Kennedy, in making a distinction between their problems.

That meeting has taken the edge off the idea that a personal conversation "at the summit" can ease tension or settle any fundamental issues. There isn't the pressure now for "summit" conferences as a cure-all.

On the contrary, the feeling today among officials of the various governments in western Europe is that President Kennedy has cleared the air for the kind of policies that he has just proclaimed

Because the speech was really of more direct concern to the American people than to Europeans-for defense budgets and military preparations undertaken by the United States are not subjects with which the people in Europe are very familiar-the main point conveyed was the sense of determination and firmness on the part of the American government in insisting on the maintenance of Allied rights in West Berlin.

It means that men have had some idea what it was all about cheologists had figured-and how they figure is beyond me because I have quit taking them seriously. They obviously are guessing.

They are of a kind with eggheads who tell what things are like on the other planets in our solar system and even branch out and make up stories about the stars. They are like the fellow who asks first if anyone present knows what he is talking about, because if no one knows he can speak freely - without fear of contradiction.

The time that man has been on earth with some sense of purpose is among a fat list of things that are unknowable - and I call it a "fat list" because mine keeps growing all the time.

It keeps growing as fast as

Q. If the world's population continues to increase at the present rate, how long will it take to overpopulate the earth? A. At the beginning of the Christian Era, the population of the earth was about 250 million. By 1650 it had doubled. The world population today is about 2500 million (21/2 billion). Some scientists estimate that if the present trend continues, by A.D. 2026 (just 65 years from now), our great-grandchildren will no longer have room to breathe, let alone stand. More conservative men of science put off the dire date for another 700 years. Regardless of who is right, "standing room only" is in prospect for those who are around to welcome the third millennium A.D.

O. Does the drinking of wine cause gout? A. Not according to a San Francisco doctor. Medical histories of 200 gout patients showed no connection between the disease and the drinking of wine. Gout is an hereditary disorder due to a supposed abnormality in excretion of uric acid by the kidneys. Gouty attacks may last a few days to a few weeks. Usually one joint is involved, the great toe being most commonly affected.
